Bob Mackison	The Board documents suggest that PPE was available for all staff that needed it. It goes on to say the instructions for PPE were changing. Surely the Trust management are responsible for the safety of all staff on their sites. I understand that porters who dealt with COVIS dead patients were not issued with satisfactory PPE. Is this the case and what will be done to change things? Pillows – are they contained in plastic?	James Marsh	Yes, the trust have a responsibility for staff safety We are not aware that any members of staff have been issued with the wrong PPE. We are issuing PPE in line with national guidance (from Public Health England), and working with all of our teams so that they understand the right level of PPE for the location and the clinical interaction. Yes
